Fall 2014

NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

One of the things I am very grateful for is a Library Board that believes in keeping up a building and fixing problems. This isn't always the case for other libraries. Funding and uncaring boards can prevent some buildings from receiving the attention they need. Oftentimes, old Carnegie buildings are sold, or given modern updates that take away from their original character. The Galion Public Library Board not only takes care of this building but has gone above and beyond to keep it as close to its original Carnegie design as possible. When the side supports to the front steps started buckling, they chose to repair them identically as possible to the original design but also voted to save the original stone steps rather than pull them out and pour concrete. Even now, we have an anonymous donor who is going to replace our old 1960s front lights with lights that are more architecturally correct for the building. As a result of these efforts, our Carnegie Library is known across the state for being the most like its original design. We've been written about in books and we've even had visitors stop by just to see the building.

This fall we will be replacing the lower entryway door and sides. Due to the flooding in that area, the wood door and entryway are starting to deteriorate. We can't cure the water problem but we will be putting a new, aluminum doorway that will not deteriorate. I know the Board will take great effort to put something in that works and will look like it belongs to the building. In fact, they are also planning on putting in a much needed automatic door opener as well. One of the reasons I became director here is because of how well the Board kept their building. It's a good sign of a good library.
